

Royalty Payments - 'Booty' Scheme

'Booty' Scheme – An Explanation

The 'Booty' scheme provides a simple way for us to split Royalty payments across multiple pieces of work and to multiple contributors in the same publication

Royalties will be calculated as 20% of the sales of each publication

- There is no minimum sales quantity required and no cap to the number of applicable sales

The split of Royalties between contributors will be primarily based on the quantity of content

Payments of Royalties will be calculated and paid monthly, one month in arrears

'Booty' Scheme – An Explanation

Because we will not be able to calculate the exact split of Royalties until the content of each publication is finalised, we need another way to keep track of Royalty allocations

To assist in this calculation, each piece of work included will be allocated a number of points up to a maximum of 100

- Points will be allocated based on standard page rates, however additional points may be given for content considered to have significant impact

Once the content for a publication is finalised, the Royalty points for all the content included is added together, to give a total for the whole publication

- From this total, Royalty payments per contributor are easily calculated as a percentage

'Booty' Scheme – An Explanation

To assist in this explanation further we will look at two example contributors in detail, both fortunate enough to have their work published in one of our publications ;o)

Anna has a single cartoon published, it is allocated 15 points

- Anna's total for this publication is 15 points

Bob has two comic strips published, one allocated 50 points and the other 75 points

- Bob's total for this publication is 125 points

We believe our marketing campaign will drive significantly better sales than our first example

Should this be the case, the benefit will be passed on to all contributors under our scheme

Of course, an outcome with a lower return is also a possibility... But, with a combination of great content and great marketing, we expect to have very significant sales right from our 1st issue

We hope you will join us at Skye Bear in this exciting new venture!
